Dated: July 22, 2019

Please be advised that Hewlett Packard Enterprise Company (“HPE”) has decided to terminate its previous efforts to seek tax rulings from the Australian Taxation Office (“ATO”) in relation to the tax treatment of the Everett SpinCo, Inc./DXC Technology Company shares (“DXC shares”) and Seattle SpinCo, Inc./Micro Focus International PLC American Depository Shares (“MF ADSs”) distributed to HPE shareholders in Australia as well as the tax treatment of the adjustment/conversion of outstanding HPE long-term incentive awards (stock options and restricted stock units) into rights over DXC Shares or MF ADSs for those HPE employees who transferred to DXC Technology Company or Micro Focus International PLC as a result of those spin-merge transactions.

On the basis that no ATO tax rulings will be forthcoming, affected shareholders in Australia should contact their personal tax advisors regarding the proper taxation of the distribution of DXC Shares and MF ADSs and any subsequent transactions in those shares/ADSs, based upon the employee/former employee shareholder's personal tax position and circumstances. Similarly, former HPE employees whose outstanding HPE long-term incentive awards converted into rights over DXC Shares or MF ADSs as a result of having their employment transferred to those companies in the spin-merge transactions should contact their personal tax advisors regarding the proper taxation of the adjustment/conversion of their long-term incentive awards.
